

Celebrating 40 years of passion for design and innovation, Managing Director Kirsten Robeson tells Homes & Interiors why the company has always been devoted to longevity.

Established in 1979, Cameron Interiors has recently celebrated 40 years in the residential design industry. From the very start, the Scottish company developed a well-earned reputation as a purveyor of creative luxury design and craftsmanship.

The firm is the proud Bulthaup partner for Scotland. Bulthaup, renowned worldwide for the architecture of living spaces, combines innovation and precision together with superlative expertise and technical perfection – all qualities that Cameron Interiors emulate.

“We carefully choose all our suppliers and partners to make sure they share our vision and deliver to the highest standards,” says Kirsten. “This enables us to create unparalleled and innovative design for the kitchen, bedroom and living space of the most discerning clients.”

The team at Cameron Interiors is dedicated to perfecting each space to allow a unique design to emerge which not only looks beautiful but is personally designed for each living situation.

Working closely, everyone from the designers to the installation team loves what they do and it shows. Each team member brings something different to the company, offering clients a genuine wealth of knowledge.

Longevity in the industry is an achievement to celebrate, and Kirsten credits the company’s staying power to a number of factors: “our loyal customers who recommend us and come back to us for a design; having fantastic products that stand the test of time, and our hardworking team who build strong relationships with clients, are all key components of our success. Our expertise and reputation have been built up over four decades and we believe a major part of our ongoing success stems from taking the time to understand how each individual client lives day to day in order to create a functional but stylish space that works for their specific needs and requirements.

“We don’t just create spaces that look good, we design them to work well with precision and perfection in mind,” she adds.

It’s clear from talking to Kirsten that the client is always in the forefront of everything the company does. The team believe that a successful project is not just about a standout design, but also keeping the customer in mind every step of the way. Kirsten adds: “a design team can only create the perfect space if they truly understand the lifestyle of the client, which is why communication and understanding are key.”

THE LONG game

“Quality of craftsmanship, authentic materials and design beauty will always endure”

Kirsten Robeson, Managing Director
Cameron Interiors

40
years